Gordie, the gorilla

Gordie, the gorilla, had a big problem. He was extremely small. He was only three centimetres tall. Only three! Can you believe that? How small! Gordie loved Halloween. It was his favourite time of the year. You know why? On Halloween, Gordie dressed up in an extra extra large King Kong costume. A twenty-five-meter costume! How big! How happy Gordie was on Halloween!

Morris, the monster

Morris was a good monster, but horrendous and terrifying.
Everyone ran away when they saw Morris appear!
He had no family and no friends, but a good heart.
How gloomy! How dramatic!
On Halloween, everyone wanted to take pictures with Morris.
They all loved his supposed costume.
But the rest of the year, nobody wanted to be with him.

Moses, the mosquito

This is the story of Moses, the mosquito.
Moses had an ultra-super mega-hyper spooky superpower.
Every Halloween, Moses could become invisible.
He loved to bother everyone, and no one could see him.
He enjoyed buzzing around and biting boys and girls... like you!

Sally, the snake

Sally was a weird snake with two heads, three hands, and four legs.

She was born this way, but she was a big disgrace to her family!

Mummy and daddy didn't love Sally. How depressing!

Sally just wanted to be a normal snake, like all snakes, and to be loved.
She only felt better on Halloween, the perfect time for those who look different.

Stephanie, the spider

Stephanie was a creepy spider with evil ideas.

She didn't have eight legs, she had forty-five.

Wow! Forty-five! Too many legs!

Too dangerous for such a diabolical spider.

On Halloween, Stephanie loved kicking kids with her legs.

So, watch out!
